Dear Alumni and Friends,

As the Grounded Visionaries campaign propelled through year two, we thank you for your generous contributions to the GSD. Your support was vital to a key campaign priority: attracting and enrolling the best and brightest students. Through greater access to design education, you empower our exceptional students to make incredible impacts on the built environment.

We had many occasions to showcase the next generation of design leaders during the last year through global studios, the inaugural student fellowship reception, and other programs made possible through your financial contributions. Inspiring conversations about the power of design and design thinking underscored the accomplishments of thought leaders and innovators in our community. Together, we explored some of the most complex issues facing our society. Harvard Design: Chicago provided a platform for groundbreaking research and approaches to adaptive architecture and to celebrate the contributions of GSD alumni to Chicago’s reputation as a world-renowned city for design innovation. In Miami, you unraveled the imagination of the design process and provided it form with UNBUILT—the 2015 DesignMiami/ Harvard GSD
Pavilion, designed by GSD students. In Jakarta, you examined the role of new mass-transit infrastructure with the Spring 2016 global studio, Jakarta: Models of Collective Space for the Extended Metropolis. Your contributions towards professional and networking events and attendance on campus at reunions, lectures, exhibitions, and portfolio reviews have gone a long way in building a community at the GSD and are central to our ability to make lasting change.

It was thrilling to experience the effects of your support for student fellowships and financial aid during our inaugural Student Fellowship Reception in the spring. During this vibrant gathering, many of you united with students to hear how financial support endows meaningful experiences and more flexibility to pursue their passions. Showcasing our outstanding financial aid beneficiaries left us optimistic about the future of our alumni community and its ability to tackle pressing global challenges.

In the pages that follow, you will learn how your financial commitment helps the field of design play a transformative role in addressing social issues. We are very grateful for your generosity. Our hope is that you will be provoked and amazed about our collective community and will consider seeking out like-minded grounded visionaries—committed challengers who can join us in giving to the future of design.

As we look forward to another successful year ahead, your contributions will help us expand support for our world-class students, invest in necessary physical infrastructure to boost cutting-edge work at the intersection of pedagogy and research, and broaden the reach of design knowledge through the School’s research platform.

Through our collective hard work, we persistently ask why and what if, and will continue to research, speculate, design, and lead. Together, we will be grounded visionaries.

Best wishes,

Philip L. Harrison AB ’86, MArch ’93

Campaign Co-Chairs
I was a pioneering woman city planner and the GSD trained me for the field and gave me essential knowledge, confidence, contacts, colleagues, and valuable credentials throughout my career. One of the most important things I learned at the GSD was collaboration with other design professionals through the interdisciplinary studio courses and charettes.

I can’t say where my drive to understand things came from, but it was certainly nurtured during my three and one half years at the GSD. The school of today is infinitely richer in its offerings than my school of fifty years ago, but at its core, it still nurtures the understanding of our world. That is why I provide what modest financial support that I can.

The Harvard Graduate School of Design was a great influence on my life. It shaped a critical and broad worldview which I try to employ daily. Harvard exposed me to serious, creative, and committed people with a true sense of mission to work together. That’s something we all need now as we go on in life and face constant challenges. The GSD gave me confidence and that is a gift of immeasurable worth. To make a donation to the GSD is to help young leaders shape the world of tomorrow.

Industry Giving: Advancing the Global Discourse on Design

Leading global design firms recognize the value in investing in the future of design education. As the premier design school, regularly leading rankings in our core disciplines, the Harvard University Graduate School of Design has a history of leadership and innovation that sets the standard for design education. Our alumni become principals at some of the most respected firms, directing innovative work around the globe.

Perkins+Will pledged a multi-year gift that will total $300,000 over the course of the Grounded Visionaries Campaign to advance the design professions through innovative design education and encourage a culture of giving to the School among other firms, large and small. According to Philip L. Harrison AB '86, MArch '93, Grounded Visionaries Campaign Co-Chair and Perkins+Will CEO, “Industry philanthropy at the GSD is an impactful mechanism to engage both organizations and individuals who share a passion for the global discourse on design while providing essential resources necessary to push the boundaries of what is possible in the built environment.”

The GSD is actively seeking the commitment of industry leaders to invest in design education by providing funding for the School’s growing research agenda and need for student financial aid. Design firms understand the value of championing the next generation of leaders through philanthropic support of the GSD. Following the lead of Perkins+Will, Elkus Manfredi Architects and Hickok Cole have contributed annual gifts of $25,000 and $10,000 respectively, to provide unrestricted support to the School. Additional recent multi-year investments in the School’s pedagogy and research by AECOM and Knoll of $900,000 and $300,000, respectively, will bolster access to unique opportunities in our multi-year studio research model. The AECOM studios are focusing on emerging cities in Southeast Asia, while the Knoll studios are considering the impact of the shifting nature of exploration on work spaces.
Recognizing the impact the GSD is making on the future of our built environment transcends architecture and design firms, industry leaders, like Autodesk, Beijing Capital Land, LG Hausys America, Inc., and Merck KGaA, are buoying the GSD’s capacity for research through generous philanthropy. A $50,000 gift from the Autodesk BUILD Grant has sustained two research projects this year, exploring robotics applications and researching dynamic prismatic structures, both for the AEC industry. Similarly, LG Hausys America, Inc. has invested in the GSD’s Harvard Center for Green Buildings and Cities with $300,000 over three years for research related to energy-saving and eco-friendly products, materials, and construction, specifically targeted towards the Center’s net-zero headquarters research project.

Further underscoring industry’s belief in the value of innovation through design, Merck KGaA, underwrote for the first of a two-part symposium on smart materials at Harvard Design: Chicago, Smart Materials and Adaptive Architectures. Reinforcing the School’s commitment to real estate studies, Beijing Capital Land has pledged $300,000 over five years to advance the MDes Real Estate and the Built Environment concentration—this gift will provide financial aid funding to students and further expand the program.

Honoring the School’s remarkable legacy, we are committed to enhancing innovative thinking and creative excellence. With support from our friends at firms, companies, and foundations, we can actively guide our ambitious research inquiries to advance the global discourse on design.

Brian D. Lee MArch ’78 and Wendy Szeto Lee made a significant philanthropic investment in the School this year aimed toward student financial aid. After nearly four decades of successful professional practice, Brian and Wendy are big believers in the continued relevance of a GSD education and the capacity of cutting-edge research and forward-thinking curriculum to create a real and meaningful impact on the built environment.

Despite a prolonged period of limited engagement, Brian has recently reconnected with the GSD, first as a member of the Dean’s Advisory Council (2009–2012), and now as a member of the Grounded Visionaries Campaign Committee. “In the past few years, I’ve had the opportunity to hear Dean Mostafavi’s vision, and to see first-hand the transformative power of design education for students. GSD students leave the School as design leaders. I am proud to be part of it, to see the GSD fulfilling its mission, attracting and educating the highest quality designers and thinkers. It makes it easy to think of the School as a smart investment in our future.”

As a young professional fresh out of design school, Brian joined Skidmore, Owings & Merrill (SOM), where he continues to practice and is now a partner. Starting out in San Francisco, not far from his native Sacramento, Brian describes himself as “a central valley kid who understood the hardships and discrimination that I saw in the immigrant community in Chinatown.” Later, Brian became involved with various community service organizations in San Francisco and Chicago, to help the immigrant community to find housing, jobs, health care, and services. Community service came naturally—Brian remembers his father, also an architect, doing significant pro-bono design work for local community organizations and bringing him as a child to volunteer in soup kitchens.
“With so much strife in the world today, architects must try to have a positive impact on society, to address the challenges of access to opportunities, healthcare, and wealth equality. Education is at the heart of it. The GSD experience had a significant impact on my life. I was surrounded by students and professors who had unparalleled energy, talent, and vision. These people taught me not to settle for mediocrity. I see what my peers have done and I know we can make a difference. I hope to give the next generation of designers the same opportunity.”

Based in Chicago since 2007, Brian with SOM and Wendy with her own graphic design firm, the Lees share Dean Mostafavi’s vision of design as a catalyst for social change. In contemplating a recently completed design for a branch library in Chicago’s Chinatown neighborhood, Brian reflects, “City libraries like this are a great resource for all generations from all communities. At a time when Chicago is so riddled with crime and discord, it is rewarding to know that our work is enriching so many lives, providing access to vital information and a safe haven from the streets.”

While Brian and Wendy are humbled by their ability to make a significant gift to the School, Brian is quick to counsel recent alumni and lapsed donors that even a small gift ($100 per year) over a period of 30 years can have considerable impact. GSD alumni who are passionate about design will find that being connected to the 12,500-strong GSD alumni community has its own rewards—visiting campus, meeting top students, and connecting with peers at GSD events has been reinvigorating for the Lees. Brian acknowledges, “Let’s face it, people don’t go into this profession to make money, but even a small gift of time or money has its benefits. It symbolizes a commitment to this vital community, and creates opportunity for the next generation.”

Tange: A Legacy of Leadership

The GSD’s deep and ongoing relationship with the Tange family reinforces Kenzō Tange’s legacy at the School. When Paul Tange AB ’81, MArch ’85 came to Harvard in the fall of 1977, he explored courses in statistics and economics, but ultimately decided to focus on architecture. Paul credits Harvard with giving him the opportunity to choose architecture. After joining, and eventually taking over the reins of his father’s practice, Paul founded his own firm, Tange Associates, in 2002.

Kenzō Tange, whose relationship to Harvard began when he received an honorary Doctor of Arts degree from Harvard University in 1971, is among the most celebrated architects of the modern era. Through his work, which spanned five continents and six decades, Tange left a remarkable legacy of innovation, and a vivid sense of Japanese architectural traditions. Recipient of both the Pritzker Prize for Architecture in 1987 and the AIA Gold Medal in 1966, Tange has influenced students of architecture from around the globe.

In the fall of 2009, the GSD hosted the first comprehensive exhibition on Kenzō Tange anywhere in the world in more than twenty years.
Four decades ago, the GSD welcomed Kenzō Tange to lecture and research at the GSD. That relationship deepened over time, bringing Tange’s colleagues and pupils to Cambridge—including Kiyonori Kikutake, Fumihiko Maki, Toyo Ito, Yoshio Taniguichi, and Shoichi Kajima. Today, we continue to welcome Japanese students, and increasingly, the GSD community has become engaged in projects on Japanese soil. I hope to build on the legacy of engagement by extending access to our enviable Kenzō Tange archive to scholars around the globe, especially in Japan.

Mohsen Mostafavi, Dean and Alexander and Victoria Wiley Professor of Design
Curated by Seng Kuan AB ’98, AM ’04, MUP ’04, PhD ’11, Utopia Across Scales: Highlights from the Kenzō Tange Archive exhibited original models and dozens of original drawings of Tange’s best-known works, which re-examine the role of housing, monumentality, communication, and scale in architectural and urban thinking. Soon after the exhibition, in 2011, the Tange family generously gifted the Kenzō Tange Archive to the GSD’s Frances Loeb Library. The archive, which physically arrived on campus in 2013, is currently being conserved, cataloged, and digitized for global access online.

Earlier this year, in recognition of Paul’s 35th year reunion at Harvard College, and on the eve of their daughter’s graduation from the College, Paul and Denise Tange generously donated $100,000 toward Friends of the Kenzō Tange Archive Fund. Kick-started in 2012 with combined gifts totaling $125,000 from Thierry Porté AB ’79, MBA ’82 and an anonymous donor, the Fund has allowed the library to develop a preservation and digitization strategy, and to begin processing the archive. Paul and Denise’s generous gift, which has been recognized by the College as a reunion gift, will ensure that work on the archive continues and that this invaluable resource is made available to a broader audience through digitization.

According to Professor of Architecture Mark Mulligan MArch ’90, the archive has transformed his teaching: “The Kenzō Tange Archive includes dozens of projects of national and international significance, each incredibly comprehensive in its documentation. Bringing groups of students to the Archive to examine sets of original hand drawings on vellum can generate wide-ranging discussions on architectural history, techniques of representation, construction technology, and issues of professional practice. It’s a rich and diverse resource that has greatly enhanced my research and teaching at the GSD.”
Loeb Library Director Ann Whiteside aspires to expand access to the archive. “The ambition to extend access to these primary documents to a global audience through digitization will ensure that Tange’s visionary thinking informs future generations around the globe.”

The Tange family’s munificence has not been limited to these recent gifts to the GSD. In 1984, Kenzō and Takako Tange established the Kenzō Tange Visiting Professorship at Harvard, which brings luminaries to campus each year to teach and lecture. With their gift, Paul and Denise Tange have embraced the legacy of design leadership that has long been associated with the Tange name.

Nothing is more important than design and its impact in solving the world’s most complex problems. The application of design thinking to complexity is the key to human advancement globally. Urbanism + Citymaking: Confronting the Challenges of Modern-day Cities

This year, the School’s generous donors have acknowledged the GSD’s leadership in topics related to urbanism and citymaking. Whether through the establishment of a fellowship honoring a former faculty member, or for a student to study affordable housing, or the generous gift of two friends in support of a new design prize in real estate, GSD donors are sustaining the School’s ongoing commitment to the essential challenges facing cities today.

Thanks to the generosity of nearly 200 friends, colleagues, and former students, the GSD and the Loeb Fellowship have partnered to establish and endow the James G. Stockard, Jr. Fellowship Fund. A visionary and an inspiration to generations of GSD students, James G. Stockard, Jr. MCP ’68, LF ’78 helped shape the Loeb Fellowship into a powerful force for positive change during his tenure, while embedding a sense of social responsibility in countless GSD students. This Fund will celebrate his legacy by recognizing a meritorious student from any design discipline who shares Stockard’s commitment to advancing smart design concepts in affordable housing.

Similarly, long-term friends, business partners, and GSD advocates Samuel Plimpton MBA ’77, MArch ’80 and William J. Poorvu MBA ’58 joined forces to establish the Plimpton Poorvu Design Prize. “This prize is intended to honor innovative thinking applied to realistic constraints,” Poorvu says. He explains that “Successful developments depend on far more than good design or a good location—the real estate game is complex. We hope to encourage collaborative work, bringing together a broad spectrum of experiences to create an informed plan.” Awarded for the first time this year to a pair of architecture students for their work on a conservation and redevelopment project that successfully integrates design, feasibility, and implementation strategies, the annual prize will recognize the top team or individual responsible for designing a commercially viable real estate project completed as part of the GSD curriculum.

Beyond prizes and fellowships, donors are providing philanthropic support for our pedagogy. In the past decade, the School has successfully pioneered and refined an innovative, three-year research studio model, including a series completed in fall 2014, which studied three Chinese cities over three years with support from AECOM. A second AECOM-sponsored series began this year with Jakarta: Models of Collective Space for the Extended Metropolis, which examined the role of new mass transit infrastructure as a driver for new models of collective space.

The multi-year research studio model is beneficial to students, faculty, and the local community, as well as design professionals. “There are mutual benefits for the professional community in having a close relationship with academia, especially for AECOM with the GSD,” says Sean Chiao MAUD ’88, president of AECOM Asia Pacific. “Our collaboration during the China and Jakarta studios has allowed students and faculty the opportunity to build stronger knowledge about global trends, especially the growth of urbanization in the developing world, and forge community partnerships while working in concert with the local community. Throughout the process, AECOM has been inspired by the GSD students resulting in a rise in innovation during our day-to-day-practice.”

The design of our cities has profound impact on our health and well-being. The GSD’s faculty, students, and alumni are leaders collaborating across disciplines and institutions to imagine better urban environments and to make them a reality.

The H. Langford Warren Society recognizes all alumni and friends of the GSD who have provided generous future support through life income plans, bequest provisions, or other deferred gift arrangements. The Warren Society is named for H. Langford Warren, an exemplary leader and visionary, who founded the School of Architecture at Harvard. He established a model of cross-disciplinary collaboration that is still a hallmark of the GSD, joining the fields of science and fine arts to the study of architecture, and helped develop the nascent field of landscape architecture.

Ambassadors

The GSD has engaged a number of alumni ambassadors who come from an array of fields, ages, and regions composed of designers, practitioners, planners, developers, academics, legal experts, critics, and thought leaders. They work to further the connection between students, other alumni and the global GSD community.

Alumni Council

The Alumni Council is the primary representative body of GSD alumni, with the fundamental goal to promote the engagement of the alumni community and the advancement of the GSD in the world.

The impact of the GSD alumni community spans the globe with expanding opportunities for thought-provoking discourse and building rewarding connections with fellow alumni and the School. This past year, over 1,600 alumni and friends assembled at 28 GSD-hosted events covering 15 cities and six countries. Highlights include design lectures from Dean Mohsen Mostafavi, department chairs, and faculty at iconic cultural institutions, receptions at professional conventions offering valuable networking opportunities, inspiring ambassador events hosted by Alumni Council members, and exclusive tours of provocative structures and landscapes designed by GSD alumni. Through this expanded footprint and heightened interconnectivity, GSD alumni are amplifying their creativity and innovation to transform the built environment.

Last September, alumni from the Classes of 1965, 1985, 1990, 1995, and 2005 reconnected with each other and the GSD during a festive reunion weekend in Cambridge. A dynamic program provided alumni opportunities to experience current studios. and courses, engage in discussion with academic department chairs and Dean Mohsen Mostafavi, as well as experience the range of resources available to current students from the Loeb Library and the Fabrication Lab, to research projects and Centers at the GSD. Two weeks later, alumni and friends joined the GSD in Chicago for the Alumni + Friends Weekend. Harvard Design: Chicago began with the Adaptive Architectures and Smart Materials Conference, an inspiring series of panels and events exploring design innovations for architecture and industry. The conference featured over 20 thought leaders, academics, building scientists, and practitioners as presenters and discussion participants. The culmination of the weekend featured an inspiring tour of local projects designed by GSD alumni.

In collaboration with Rogers Stirk Harbour + Partners, the School hosted the symposium Collaboration: The Lineage of an Architectural Practice, at the Leadenhall Building in London. Alumni and friends attended this symposium to unravel a series of issues that have been central to the firm’s practice and vital to the practice of architecture. GSD participants included Dean Mohsen Mostafavi, K. Michael Hays, Hanif Kara, and Farshid Moussavi MArch ’91, who joined speakers Lord Richard Rogers, Graham Stirk, and Ivan Harbour. Also in March, recent graduates gathered at Interboro Partners in Brooklyn, NY for a lively discussion and networking event hosted by Tobias Armborst MAUD ’02, Dan D’Oca MUP ’02, and Georgeen Theodore MAUD ’02.

To honor the meaningful contributions of alumni and friends in support of fellowships and financial aid for students, the GSD hosted our Inaugural Fellowship Reception in April. Alumni and students shared mutually inspirational stories of impact during festive presentations and networking. The student recipients conveyed their tremendous gratitude for the generosity of alumni and donors that enabled them to attend the world’s premier design school.
The GSD’s exceptional scholarship and commitment to transformative research were spotlighted during Your Harvard: Canada in Toronto which featured faculty speaker Rahul Mehrotra MAUD ’87, Professor of Urban Design and Planning. Your Harvard events in Atlanta and Boston rounded out the trio of celebrations for global Harvard alumni community during the academic year. Marking the tenth anniversary of the annual GSD Alumni Council Unsung Hero Book Prize—an award which has been embraced by the GSD to honor students who make a difference in the GSD community without recognition from others—the contributions of current and past award recipients were celebrated with a book exhibition in the Loeb Library.

Plans are well underway for a robust event calendar for 2016–2017 as the GSD looks forward to engaging alumni and friends, near and far, to celebrate the achievement of our community of collaborative alumni as they work to address global challenges across practices and disciplines.

"The GSD provides students the opportunity to see good design as a producer of visual pleasure AND value. For me, it enabled me to attain my professional dreams, and I will always be thankful. My wife Marla and I make GSD a philanthropic priority because the returns are through the roof!"

Loeb Fellowship Alumni Council

After completing the Fellowship year, Loeb alumni join over 450 alums in a robust network of professional colleagues. Delegates from each class work with a set of officers to plan activities that extend the connections and mutual learning among Fellows, including memorial luncheons, an annual fall study tour, and an anniversary reunion and symposium every five years.

“The GSD’s collaborative and holistic approach encourages students to think altruistically about their role in helping solve the world’s most pressing issues related to the built environment and human development. I am committed to furthering that mission of the School. Providing philanthropic support to the GSD, its faculty, and students is ultimately an investment in making the world a better place for all.”

In Fall 2016, the Harvard University Graduate School of Design (GSD) and John A. Paulson School of Engineering and Applied Sciences (SEAS) launched a collaborative Master in Design Engineering (MDE) degree program. The MDE External Advisory Board is a group of experts who work at the forefront of this fast-growing field or are deeply engaged in using and promoting its tools in various path-breaking applications. Their counsel is critical to ensuring that the MDE program stays in step with workforce needs and changing directions in the emerging field of Design Engineering.
