

The Harvard University Graduate School of Design educates leaders
in design, research, and scholarship to make a resilient, just,
and beautiful world.

As the premier design school, the Harvard University Graduate School of Design (GSD) continues to attract the most talented students from around the globe and faculty whose meaningful research, practice, and pedagogy quite literally shape the world. The GSD relies on the support of alumni and friends to maintain an innovative and inclusive educational environment that pushes the boundaries of design education.

ANNUAL LEADERSHIP GIVING

The Josep Lluís Sert Council is a community of annual leadership donors who are committed to supporting the GSD, its students, and the future of design education. Sert Council members play an integral role in helping to advance the GSD's preeminent status and provide essential funding to support our students, faculty, and degree programs.

Every question that is urgent today anywhere in the world—questions of economy, environment, politics, technology, social value—has design repercussions.

To address all of these questions, we have to reach across disciplines: through engineering, design, and technology; through politics, the environment, and policy; through relationships, equities, and culture. The extraordinary thing about design is that it touches so many issues. It's the most relevant discipline because design creates the world around us at the scale of the network, the region, the city, the landscape, the building, the chair, and even the fork. All of these scales, these relations, and these connections construct our collective future. I'm so excited to be part of a school that puts this future at its very center.

Thank you for considering a gift to the GSD and membership in Josep Lluís Sert Council this year. Your gift provides the resources needed to support our students and faculty, who together create meaningful change and impact the future of design.
