Donor Honor Roll

Dear Alumni and Friends,

Last fall, the Harvard University Graduate School of Design launched Grounded Visionaries, a comprehensive, strategic campaign that sets forth bold aspirations to expand, enhance, and empower our community's capacity to shape a better world. Through new resources and engagement, we hope to educate the next generation of extraordinary design leaders and help solve some of the most complex issues facing our society.

The campaign is an extension of the GSD's daring optimism and innovation in the field of design. We constantly seek new collaborations across Harvard and around the globe, creating structures and environments that have lasting effects on the quality of life for millions of people. We recognize design as a catalyst for change and passionately pursue a more just, beautiful, and sustainable world through design excellence.

Many of you joined us at our campaign launch, and at events in communities around the globe, for inspiring conversations about design and to explore the exciting accomplishments of GSD thought leaders and innovators—students, faculty, researchers, and alumni alike. In Miami, you discussed the unique challenges of urban resiliency and the design of water-centric environments. In Beijing, you joined us in conversation about the School's groundbreaking work in China. You participated in lectures and exhibitions in Cambridge, attended networking receptions in Denver, Seattle, and Atlanta, and toured the work of regional alumni in cities around the globe. Hosted by both the GSD and by local ambassadors worldwide, such events are an extension of the GSD campus, and your increased attendance at these activities reflects a broad-based, engaged community of alumni and friends.

As the following pages demonstrate, you are committed to addressing worldwide challenges through financial support of the School's vibrant design programs. Each and every dollar you give helps us advance the GSD's unique status as a place where practice, pedagogy, research, and design are brought together to challenge assumptions, test new and provocative ideas, and develop innovative answers to pressing questions. This is no small project.

On behalf of everyone at the GSD, we are grateful for your commitment. We will work hard to show you all the opportunities and challenges that the School is currently pursuing through your support, and we hope you will join us in making the year ahead an outstanding success.

Best wishes,

Phil Harrison AB '86, MArch '93

Every day I spent at the GSD felt like a gift. From early morning classes to late nights in the trays, I was energized by my work and by my extraordinary peers, mentors, and professors. When I think of the good work they are all doing, it blows my mind. My friends and experiences at the GSD continue to enrich my life.

Harvard GSD AECOM Project on China

Sean Chiao MAUD '88

In 2012, through a philanthropic initiative with AECOM Asia Pacific, the GSD embarked on a three-year research and design study. The Harvard GSD AECOM Project on China focused on two fundamental ambitions: reimagining the definition and components of cities, and pursuing new forms of urbanization based on challenges posed by development. Each year, the initiative focused on a theoretical problem and practical challenge using a particular city as an example. The first year examined the problem of the megaplot—the basic planning unit for rapid and speculative urbanization—using Xiamen as a case study. The following year, with Macau as the paradigm, the studio investigated the challenges faced by cities in city-regions and the effects of cross-border urbanization. In the final year of the study, the studio explored the status of the countryside in the context of state-driven initiatives to urbanize rural areas, with a focus on existing villages and new agricultural towns in Zhongmu County.

For one week each year, a new team of students joined Christopher Lee, associate professor in practice of urban design, and Simon Whittle, teaching assistant, onsite to participate in seminars alongside AECOM staff. Students explored how their research and proposals could be implemented through exhibitions and publications.

Lee shares, “With the support of AECOM, we were able to formulate a unique research and design studio that allowed our students to completely immerse themselves in the present and real challenges of urbanization in China. This deep and close engagement with stakeholders and decision makers in the cities and towns we visited made our research and subsequent design propositions directly relevant. At the same time, they opened completely new ways of thinking about the development of Chinese cities.”

Sean Chiao MAUD '88, president of AECOM Asia Pacific, saw the project as a unique way to tap into the GSD's intellectual capital and remain engaged with the School. Intrigued by the prospect of investigating an issue through the lens of three different cities over a period of time, he made a generous commitment to fund the project. Chiao also viewed the collaboration with the GSD as a way to “provoke the dialogue and find a different way of thinking, to see if we can stimulate ideas or new approaches. It's very important for practitioners like AECOM staff because we're always trying to be innovative and provide solutions.”

As an alumnus, supporting the School with a studio research gift was personally meaningful for Chiao. “A major part of my career achievement is attributed to the GSD, through the education I received and through the alumni network. There are a lot of GSD alumni on our team at AECOM, and through projects like this, we are able to continue our relationship and stay up-to-date on the latest research and findings. We see value in giving back to the School through programs that provide opportunities for students to gain practical experience and to build stronger connections with the GSD.”

Recent Graduate Giving

Riley Poblete MArch '14

Riley Poblete MArch '14 knew he wanted to study architecture much earlier than most. While still in high school, Poblete was lucky enough to participate in an engineering enrichment program at the University of Toronto, and was exposed to advanced software—like Revit and Inventor—by a zealous teacher. After competing in several local design competitions, he won the AIA Houston's annual Michael G. Myers Design & Scholarship Competition, and subsequently enrolled at the University of Houston, graduating summa cum laude in 2012 with a bachelor of architecture degree.

Not one to rest on his laurels, Poblete worked part-time throughout his undergraduate career. During this time, a partner at HOK (a global design, architecture, engineering, and planning firm) encouraged him to shift his focus from engineering to design. Upon graduation, Poblete joined the design team at HOK full-time to work under Peter Ruggiero MAUD '84, who instilled in him an appreciation of “the space between an instigator of urban space.”

Poblete came across a number of GSD-produced publications while at HOK, including Ecological Urbanism, A Guide to Shopping, A Great Leap Forward, and The Function of Ornament, which he found especially provocative. These readings inspired him to apply to the School, and he began his coursework in architecture and urban design. While attending, he continued to explore a theme that arose from his undergraduate thesis: urban growth patterns, the development of industrial sites, and resource extraction in proximity to urban space. Today, Poblete is working as an architectural designer at Gensler in Houston where he concentrates on high-rise and large-scale campus design.

Poblete says his giving follows the spirit of his parents' example, and he enjoys contributing to institutions that have helped shape him, “To me, it's a way to say ‘thank you.’ If none of us gave back, there would not be institutions like Harvard.”

This past year, Poblete increased his donation, a sign of his continued commitment to the GSD, and his gratitude for a world-renowned education at the School. He reflects, “I was lucky to get the opportunity to work with amazing people during my two years at the GSD. I would like to help other students, no matter their economic means, have the same opportunities as me.”

Designing a Multidisciplinary Future at the GSD

Bart Voorsanger
MArch '64

Bart Voorsanger MArch '64 understands the value of connected multidisciplinary design. The founding partner and principal of Voorsanger Architects PC in New York City, his firm works on projects ranging from small residential interiors to multi-million dollar residential and institutional buildings, many of which involve collaborations within other design disciplines. Voorsanger sees a future in which design disciplines increasingly intermingle. To ensure that students at the GSD are at the forefront of these intersections, he established the Voorsanger Fellowship Fund. The fund will support four top-performing students, one from each of the GSD's disciplines—architecture, urban planning, landscape architecture, and design studies—who hold “great promise for making a significant contribution to these fields.”

“The future of design is this absolute, multidimensional world of integrating design disciplines. We're all overlapping, and there are fewer barriers between them,” he says. “Harvard has an ambitious, kaleidoscopic mix of professional talent at the GSD that will not only contribute to the quality of the students' educational experience but will also sustain a level of excellence and reputation to assure the future of significant design contributions in the public realm.”

Voorsanger believes that creating synergies and producing outcomes across disciplines is vital to the mission of the GSD. The Voorsanger Fellowship Fund stipulates that the four selected finalists come together annually to present to the GSD community in the connected fields of their studies.

Voorsanger's ultimate wish is that the fellows be able to focus on their passion for their work, unhindered by concerns about student loan debt. “The GSD has continued to excel in both the art and practice of architecture, which are two very different things, keeping them in a state of colloidal excellence,” he says. “It's really extraordinary, and I hope my gift will inspire other architects and those who love design to support the GSD and encourage the best to come to Harvard.”

Academic rigor and real-world experience at the GSD translates to a place where students, staff, and faculty are able to address some of the greatest challenges of our time. Investing in the GSD is transformative—it is a culture where ideas and innovation are boundless and implementable.

Expanded Engagement: 2014–15

With each passing graduation, the GSD alumni population grows in number and moves to make their mark in cities around the world. The School aims to engage with alumni wherever they may be, and last year 20 GSD events were held in locales as diverse as Miami and Beijing. Over 1,500 alumni and friends attended the activities, which kicked off with the Grounded Visionaries design weekend and campaign launch in Cambridge. For the event, nearly 700 faculty, students, alumni, and friends convened to celebrate the School's extended community, legacy of impact, and bold ambitions for the future of design education. A full program of speeches, panels, and student presentations considered a wide spectrum of topics—from the future of urbanism to new models of design research—where GSD alumni filled both audiences and podiums.

In addition to the launch, the GSD had unprecedented attendance at a variety of other alumni gatherings. These included successful receptions at professional association conferences such as ULI in New York, ASLA in Denver, AIA in Atlanta, and APA in Seattle; a vibrant weekend as part of Art Basel's Design Miami; a private tour of St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York; and a guided tour of TAXI, a mixed-use development in Denver.

Beyond these activities, our community of alumni and friends came to the GSD campus to participate in professional symposia, attend or present the GSD lecture series, visit design exhibitions in Gund Hall, and join in studio reviews. With expanded engagement a key goal of the Grounded Visionaries campaign, the School is already planning more exciting and informative events across the globe over the next year.

Transforming Aspirations into Reality

Tadashi Yanai

Every year, a new crop of students enters Gund Hall eager to grow their experience at the world's preeminent design school. Like so many before them, this next generation of leaders will cultivate a diverse skill set while on campus, eventually going on to shape communities around the globe. Now, thanks to a gift from a visionary donor, a cohort of talented individuals will be able to pursue meaningful learning opportunities at the GSD, regardless of their financial circumstances.

Seeking to empower students through an accessible design education, the UNIQLO Fellowship Fund will allow Japanese students the chance to cultivate their design and entrepreneurial skills, thereby helping to prepare them for future success. Established by Tadashi Yanai, the Chairman, President, and CEO of Fast Retailing, the company that owns UNIQLO as well as six other apparel brands, the fellowship program will award a total of $600K over the next three years to students from Japan.

Yanai shares, "At UNIQLO, we believe the intersection of design and management is a place where innovation resides, and in this realm the Harvard Graduate School of Design is an excellent institution for the pursuit of new ideas. With this gift, I hope to provide a world-class education to promising Japanese students at the GSD, where they can contribute to society and realize their dreams.”

From a single store opened in Japan in 1984, UNIQLO has since expanded to over 1,600 stores worldwide, with Fast Retailing currently holding title as the globe's fourth largest apparel retail company. In 2013 TIME Magazine named Yanai in its “Time 100,” an annual list of the most influential people in the world.

The UNIQLO Fellowship Fund reflects the School's desires to not only broaden the range of diversity within the GSD student body, but also reach beyond the limits of its core disciplines to collaborate across sectors—in this case, the field of business.

The program kicked off this past fall, and the first recipient is Kira Horie MArch '19, who is excited to be at the GSD. “I am very thankful for the UNIQLO fellowship, which has given me the opportunity to study at the ideal place for interdisciplinary and progressive design. I hope to show my appreciation through future contributions to the field of architecture,” she relates.

Dean Mohsen Mostafavi similarly hailed the Yanai gift, sharing “Support such as this not only helps the GSD secure the best and brightest students from Japan, but also ensure that graduating Japanese students have the flexibility to make career choices based on their passions rather than their debt burden. This is an essential goal of the GSD, and fundamentally important to sustaining our position as the world's top design school.”

My GSD education was a wonderful learning experience, one that opened my eyes to a whole new world of knowledge. “Design thinking” is an invaluable skill that few in business possess, and I want to help the GSD continue to produce the best and brightest design leaders.

H. Langford Warren Society

The H. Langford Warren Society recognizes all alumni and friends of the GSD who have provided generous future support through life income plans, bequest provisions, or other deferred gift arrangements. The Warren Society is named for H. Langford Warren, an exemplary leader and visionary, who founded the School of Architecture at Harvard. He established a model of cross-disciplinary collaboration that is still a hallmark of the GSD, joining the fields of science and fine arts to the study of architecture and helped develop the nascent field of landscape architecture.
